TEACHING AND EXAMINING

Undergraduate teaching

September 2000 to date; I have taught undergraduate courses on justice, the history of political thought from Plato to Rawls, the ethics of war, Mill's Utilitarianism.

Graduate teaching

Masters level/BPhil: I have taught courses in contemporary moral political philosophy (distributive justice, ethics of war, ethics of killing), and have supervised on average 4 to 7 dissertations every year. My Masters students have written dissertations on (inter alia supreme emergency and non combatant immunity, the politics of humanitarian intervention, abortion, ethics of genetics, the ethics of military occupation).

Doctoral supervision: I have supervised/co-supervised 15 doctoral students to completion so far, one of whom obtained the PSA Annual Prize for best dissertation in political theory in 2007 (on Kantian cosmopolitanism). Three have left academia. The others have secured permanent lecture-ships/tenure track positions and postdoctoral fellowships in the UK, Argentina, the USA and South Africa.

Topics supervised (inter alia): animal rights; humanitarian intervention; extraterritorial punishment; the ethics of abortion; the ethics of military occupation; killing in war; human rights; privacy; democratic theory; the ethics of the market; civil disobedience; the notion of individuality in 18th-20th century French military doctrine.

Examining

Extensive examining experience, including doctoral examination and external examining.
